AAUW Harrisburg Community Woman of the Year 2019

Sharice Johnson

AAUW Harrisburg's 2019 Community Woman of the Year Award recognizes Sharice Johnson.

Sharice is coordinator of youth development programs, mentor, and coach at Milton Hershey School. She develops special programs centered on building strong character and leadership skills for hundreds of high school students. Passionate about female empowerment, Sharice created the school's first all-girls conference known as Girls Grace.

As a result of her hard work and dedication, she was awarded the 2018 After School Champion Award by the Pennsylvania After School Youth Development Network. She has been honored to speak at the State Capitol on the topic of advocacy for youth programs and speaks regularly throughout the region on the empowerment of women and girls.

Sharice recently received recognition from the Honor Society Phi Kappa Phi as a top performing graduate student at Clemson University, where she is currently finishing her Master of Science in Youth Development Leadership.

In Sharice's honor, AAUW Harrisburg will make a donation to Someone To Tell It To, an organization which cultivates meaningful relationships through compassionate listening and training others to do the same.

Sharice will be the honored speaker at AAUW Harrisburg's spring luncheon on May 4.
